Dec. 14. 1937.

Dear Cousin Sara-

Well I should say your letter and package came as a big surprise, I could imagine what you would be sending me

I was glad for the picture and yet it is like looking at some one that I know nothing of, never having known any of my grandparents, I thank you very much for sending it to me.

This Christmas is a sad one for me not having that wonderful father of mine to be with us, he was always so patient, satisfied with much or little, never a murmur about things, he was so well last Christmas day and then so sick by the fourth of Jan. it does not seem possible at times that he is away - Sister is there at the old home place by herself she does not want to leave -

Who have you with you? Clymer and John I suppose, unless they have married and moved away -

What has become of Adeline? she used to write to me so often and now I never hear from her any more. Is your Aunt Lula still with you? seems some one wrote and said she was making her home with you -

Sara do you still own the home where I visited when I was up there? I can only think of you living at that place. You will think this nothing but questions but no one writes me from there are you still a crutcher? I know it must be hard for you to get around if you are doing house work. I am going to ask another question and I expect you will tell me that's none of my business but I would like to know how old you are? I am no spring chicken myself any more and find myself slower getting things done. I have been living in hopes of getting up there again while you and Aunt Susan were still living but seems like I never will. my husband was out of work so long. Since April he has been busy and we hope it may continue on.

Is Ervra getting still living?

We have had the coldest weather here that I can remember of just now it has moderated, and the sun is shining bright and its really nice out doors. Until a few weeks ago we had pretty roses in bloom -

Well its time to get to work again so will close thanking you again for the picture and by wishing you a very Merry Merry Christmas.

Love to all

Maud -

Would be pleased to hear from you again -
